I don't even know where to begin. My heart is literally in pieces at the thought of never being able to tell grandpa I love him or hug him ever again. he played such an important role in so many peoples lives but an even bigger one in mine... from the first day I met him he treated me like his own... and through all the headaches and mess ups he never looked at me any differently. I remember being ridiculously scared to tell him I was pregnant with Karma because I was so afraid he would be disappointed in me but instead he gave me a huge hug and said "I know your gonna be a great mom, I always said that about you" I prayed the whole 9 months that grandpa would be around at least long enough to meet my daughter but God had other plans...grandpa got to not only meet my daughter but he also became "papa" to her... he fed her when she switched to bottles he rocked her to sleep, fed her cheerios, made her laugh, and even watched a full episode of Doc McStuffins with her.... I'll never be able to tell him how grateful I was... how grateful I was for everything, thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, for unexpected hugs and him giving into Felicia and my argument of who was the favorite, for the advice he gave on life, and for the truth that he always told even if it wasn't what you wanted to hear. How thankful I was for always making me feel welcome no matter how sick or tired he was when I came over, for calling me just to check up on me to see how my job was going or how my daughter was doing... for always offering me cold cuts... he ALWAYS had cold cuts ha ha... there's a really special and sacred place in my heart for him and I will always continue to remember his spirit... and as soon as I can I promise I will drink a tall gin and tonic just for him. fly high grandpa... I love you and miss you with all my heart!
